

Model UN: Position Paper

General Assembly Regional Committee: GRULAC 1

Writing a position paper

Introduction:

Writing a position paper might seem a daunting task, especially for new delegates. But with plenty of research, you will find that writing a position paper will be straight forward and very useful in preparation for the conference.

Position papers are usually about one page long (typed size 10/11 font). Your position paper needs to include a brief introduction about why gender equality and empowerment is an important issue in your country, followed by a comprehensive breakdown of your country's position on gender equality and empowerment and associated problems and issues. A good position paper will provide facts and statistical information about the issue and its impacts in your country and also state what action your country is already taking on the issue. Finally you will put forward suggested strategies for the international community.

1. A brief introduction to your country and its history concerning the topic and committee:

- how the issue affects your country
- Your country's policies with respect to the issue and your country's justification for their policies
- quotes from your country's leader's about the issue
- statistics to support your country's position on the issue

2. Actions taken by your government on the issue

- conventions and resolutions that your country has signed or ratified that relate to the issue

3. UN actions that your country supported or opposed

- what your country believes should be done to address the issue

4. What your country would like the international community to do

- what your could achieve in the committee's resolution
- how the positions of other countries affect your country

An overview of 'Dos and Don'ts'

Addressing your assigned country's position paper

All of your research on your assigned country and about poverty will come together in the form of a position paper. This position paper will prepare you for your Committee at the Conference.

Paragraph 1 – A brief statement on why your nation feels the topic of eliminating poverty is important nationally and globally

Paragraph 2 – Addresses country's actions on a national level. Is poverty an issue for your country? If so, how? Has the government addressed the issue?

An excellent position paper includes:

Paragraph 3 – Addresses the country's action on an international level. What resolutions/ declarations has your country signed? What is your involvement in the Millennium Development Goals being achieved?

Paragraph 4 – States the actions that your country would like to see the United Nations to take on the issue of poverty

Since the position paper is written from your assigned country's point of view, it's back to the do's and don'ts

Don't	Do
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Write in the first person "I" – it's your country's position. • Write information you have learned about the country that is not relevant to the topic. • Speak about your country "negatively" and in the view of the other countries. • Support actions that are not in your country's position, even if you agree with the actions personally. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Use country name or "the government of..." • Use statistics, facts and history as they relate to the topic being discussed. • Stick with your country's policy. Even if a country has signed the Convention of the Right of the Child yet uses child soldiers, your country's official policy might be that they care about the rights of children • Be true to your country's actions on the international level. If your country is not in agreement with a policy of increasing aid to developing countries, then the delegate must remain in the position of the country regardless of his/her personal beliefs
